Mayan CEREMONY

Where Mayan magic casts its spell

Some couples find it appealing to celebrate their wedding by bringing to life ancient marriage rituals from the Mayan culture.

Mayan weddings generally take place on a beach or archeological sites in destinations located in the Mayan region of Mexico, such as Cancun, Isla Mujeres, Cozumel, Xcaret, the Mayan Riviera.

In accordance with the ancient Mayan rituals, it is recommended that before the wedding celebration the future groom gives the bride a muhul (a package of gifts made up of a gold chain, listones (wooden hair barrettes), and a huipil (a traditional, long, sleeveless dress) so that together they can take a bath of temazcal (a traditional indigenous purification steam bath).

For the grand celebration bride and groom dress in white, she with her special huipil and he in a hand-made woven suit. To recreate the perfect environment, full of magic and mysticism, the wedding should take place amidst copal incense smoke (an aromatic resin considered sacred and purifying of the environment), flowers, veils and torches or lamps. In front of the couple, the shaman or Mayan priest will evoke the four elements: water, earth, wind and fire, so that their presence may strengthen and bless the union for many years. Finally, the union of the couple is sealed with the exchange of rings or other token that represents the marriage and pledges.

The music that accompanies the event could be wind instruments and percussions (which date back to pre-Hispanic times) or live classical violin or guitar music, which can extend beyond the ceremony into the dinner celebration.
